Last year, influenced by repeated urg ings of the press and the State Commissioners of Agriculture, as well as by the conclusions reached by intelligent planters and merchants in public meetings, the farmers reduced the acreage of cotton and planted more corn, wheat, oats and other food products. The result of thus diversifying the crops was that better prices for cotton prevailed and the financial condition of the farmers was materially improved.

The agricultural journals of the South report that the amount of fertilizing materials bought for use on cotton lands is abnormally large. From nearly every section of the cotton belt comes the statement that the acreage in cotton will be larger than ever before.

The Agricultural Commissioners of Alabama and Georgia have publicly warned the farmers that they are making a EVER BEFORE SEEN IN CHARLOTTE serious mistake, and the Alabama Commissioner predicts disaster if the farmers of that State plant as great an acreage to cotton as they now intend doing.

The farmers cannot suffer alone. If they will not profit by experience they will again bring about the unfavorable conditions of two years ago for all the Southern people.—Rural World.

The Small Farmer.

The Norfolk Virginian says that the small farmer everywhere is generally doing better than the large farmer. That WATCHES FROM $4.00 UP. this is true may easily be proven by inquiring into the relative prosperity of the 40-acre farmer and the 100-acre farmer in your own neighborhood. Which is burdened with the less debt, in proportion to the total value of his land? Which is procuring the best profit upon his capital, and the largest money yield per acre; and which gets the most satisfaction out of the business of agriculture? One trouble is that we have acquired more than we can handle to the best advantage.
